February is Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month

StrongHearts Native Helpline, the National Indigenous Women's Resource Center and the Alaska Native Women's Resource Center are proud to provide this resource for Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month.

Dating violence disproportionately affects Native Americans and Alaska Natives.

Native teens face some unique circumstances like processing historical trauma. For decades, our children were removed from their homes and stolen from their families to be re-educated at boarding schools. At these schools, many children were victims of institutional abuse including regular beatings, sexual abuse, and punishment for practicing any kind of activities that contributed to the survival of their own culture. This complete disruption of Native American family life and culture fostered the same kind of historical trauma that mass violence and persecution caused earlier generations. The separation of children from their families and their culture has lasting effects that have reverberated through generations with today's youth and teens being the newest cases.

Influencers have an opportunity to help save lives.

We hope you will help us bring awareness to the issue of dating violence in Tribal communities as a way of shedding light on the devastating fact that millions of Native peoples in this country are directly experiencing abuse and threats of violence in their intimate relationships.

Some startling statistics include:

- About 1 in 9 female and 1 in 36 male high school students report having experienced sexual dating violence in the last year according to the CDC.
- Nearly 1 in 11 female and approximately 1 in 15 male high school students report having experienced physical dating violence in the last year according to the CDC.
- 26% of women and 15% of men who were victims of contact sexual violence, physical violence, and/or stalking by an intimate partner in their lifetime first experienced these or other forms of violence by that partner before age 18 according to the CDC.

We hope you will share teachings and resources about healthy relationships that honor young adults. Youth are the future of our cultural survival as Native peoples. Native youth have the power to help create positive change to end dating violence.

When approaching this issue, we ask you to use care and empathy and consider the safety of domestic violence survivors. We recommend reading What is Domestic Violence?

Native voices deserve to be heard.

Here's the tea ☕: overprotective partner stereotypes are often romanticized in movies and on television. Modern media should end the romanticization of abusive partners, especially in media geared toward younger audiences.

A sign of abuse in a relationship is when one partner controls who their partner can or cannot talk to or hang out with.

Sexual coercion = sexual violence and it is NOT OK. 🙄
 Sexual coercion happens when your partner constantly pressures you to have sex and you do it to avoid a fight even though you don't want to. <https://bit.ly/3cDeEJx>

Talking about Consent in a Relationship

Consent is...

- mandatory before any sexual activity.
- mandatory every time. Consent for one thing does not mean consent for everything.
- permission and agreement between all partners involved.
- communicating your boundaries verbally.
- voluntary.

Consent is not...

- silence.
- forced or coerced.
- permanent. You can withdraw consent at any time.
